

Podcast: Ireland's Creeping Obliteration (On the Richie Allen Show)

John Waters

2-3 minutes

In the latest of our periodic conversations, I talk with Richie Allen about the continuing invasion of Ireland by random and indifferent aliens at the invitation — nay, insistence — of the corrupt and owned Irish Government.

Ireland is the latest target of the globalist neo-colonialist assault, being subjected to massive inflows during 2022, with 2023 promising to be even worse. As the institutions and services of Irish society — hospitals, courts, transport, et cetera — disintegrate under the pressure, the Government sets its face against appeals to desist — even from directly affected communities — and the purchased media mounts campaigns to demonise those who question what is happening to even the slightest degree.

This is not an organic, naturalistic pattern of migration, but an orchestrated programme of plantation and replacement. It is also part of a full-on assault on the Caucasian peoples of the former democratic West, with a view to destroying the connections between them and their homelands.

What is happening has nothing to do with ‘compassion’. The Irish Government is not full of bleeding hearts. Our ‘leaders’ care no more for people of different colours or ethnicity than for their own people. Their objectives are entirely technocratic and ideological. They have long since abandoned their promises to serve Ireland and its people, and nowadays obey external, unseen and unaccountable masters, who have ordered the final subjugation and elimination of nations.

For 20 years, Ireland has been bullied by its treasonous ‘elites’, as though its history were indistinguishable from that of South Africa or the American Deep South. Seemingly unable to answer back to these relentless dishonest arguments, with no basis in Irish history or culture, the Irish are now within decades of obliteration as the host population of their own island, their metaphysical home.

But now, finally, it looks like the people are beginning to rise up.
