

Chaput Defends Traditionis Custodes - But Suddenly Something Goes Wrong

3-4 minutes

Many Roman Rite Catholics reject many parts of [failed, ambiguous, and disastrous] Vatican II, lamented former Philadelphia Archbishop Charles Chaput, 78, during the Eucharistic Symposium in Arlington Cathedral (October 22, video below).

"You don't have to scratch them very hard before they bleed anti-Council thoughts and sentiments," he manipulated. Arlington diocese in particular experienced one of the world's worst crackdowns on the Roman Mass. Thirteen Masses were shut down.

According to Chaput, Francis published Traditionis Custodes out of fear that the numbers of "those anti-Council folks were [suddenly?] beginning to increase, especially among young seminarians and young priests, and he wanted to make sure that the direction the Church headed at the time of the Council would be followed into the future."

He believes "personally" that Francis' way was "harsh and imprudent," but he "understands" why Francis felt he had to act at the present time.

Chaput's assessment is profoundly unenlightened. Although some Catholics abhor the calamity of the Pastoral Council, the Catholic Faith they profess is still much closer to the beliefs of the Pastoral Council than the neo-modernism and immorality of Francis and his followers.

Chaput has the same issues with his knees and legs as Francis does, but you don't see/hear him whinning and crying about it. "I'm in great pain", Francis said on his way to Bahrain. And all the journalists took out their hankerciefs and started weeping, on cue from Francis.

He speaks about how it just takes restricting the TLM to bring out the anti-conciliar sentiment, but I am certain that Summorum Pontificum did more to soften that sentiment than anything else over the past 60 years. And yes, taking away rights is, in every case, going to provoke anger, and the council is a very easy target, since nothing good has come out of it.

Sure, Archbishop Chaput, pour on some more vinegar and see if the flies come.

► "But"? Reminds me of this:

"Now you can call me Ray, or you can call me J, or you can call me Johnny, or you can call me Sonny, or you can call me Junie, or you can call me Junior; now you can call me Ray J, or you can call me RJ, or you can call me RJJ, or you can call me RJJ Jr. . . but you doesn't hasta call me Johnson!" - Bill SalugaMore

CHaput claims to have some Native American in him, which is why he did this. It's still illegit. Another neo-con appointment by the late, not great but better than what we got now, John Paul II.
